About the Athabasca Basin

The Athabasca Basin hosts the world's richest high-grade uranium deposits. The Northern area covers almost a quarter of Saskatchewan and a small portion of Alberta, and currently supplies about 20% of the world's uranium.

The region is the most inaccessible and least disturbed area of Saskatchewan. Only the southern fringe is accessible by road, and none of the local communities have all-weather road access. The combined population of these communities is about 4,500.

Athabasca Basin Development is owned by the seven communities in the Athabasca area. These communities are largely Dene First Nations communities, and include Fond du Lac, Stony Rapids, Black Lake, Hatchet Lake, Wollaston Lake, Camsell Portage and Uranium City.
